blow to election rascality and gives opportunity for the knocking out of the rascals.

WHISKY TRUST STOCKHOLDERS are reported as feeling very blue. As they drew 75 per cent dividends last year, the cause of their melancholy must be the fear of retribution. Atty.-Gen. Olney has a fine opportunity to verify their forebodings.

SPECULATORS who want the public debt increased have started another gold scare.

But as it seems to be pretty well settled now that the $100,000,000 reserve fund is available against such machinations the conspiracy will probably come to naught.

THE NEW YORK WORLD is furnishing

Atty.-Gen. Olney with all the facts necessary to a successful prosecution of the trusts. He will have to attend to the points himself and the country hopes that he will redeem the pledges of his party in this respect.

THE man who accepts the Attorney-

Generalship cannot afford to "lord it" over the man who refused it. If Mr. Olney does not resign his railroad attorneyships, he should at least leave his Boston manners in Boston while he serves as Attorney-

General in Washington.

In most Western cities the stock and bonds of gas, telephone, street railroad and other public corporations is held mostly by Eastern investors. Hence the unearned dividends on watered stock go to enrich men whose holdings only represent a

"rake-off" interest in the local prosperity.

CARTER HARRISON's paper, the Chicago

Times, is protesting vigorously against the giving away of municipal franchises and the surrender of public revenues to private individuals. The franchise-grabbing reformers are beginning to recognize the irony in the old man's promise to be a reform Mayor.

THE salaries of foreign ministers who have been raised to the sublime degree of Ambassador will not be increased without a popular protest. The dignity of a true

Democrat does not depend upon costly gauds, but springs from personal character. An elegant simplicity is what is expected of Americans.

It is true that the conceptions of the rainmakers were preceded by the predictions of Prophets Hicks and Foster. It might be well for the Kansas farmer to deal directly with those seers and save a great part of his money. If the middleman should be knocked out anywhere it is in the vending of weather supplies.

THE publication of parts of the first draft of the Russian treaty with vague hints that changes have been made serves only to confuse the public mind and arouse still further the alarm and indignation over that instrument. The Senate will consult its own dignity and the interests of its members by printing it in full as finally approved.

It is now said that the investigation of Senator Roach's record is really designed to force an inquiry into Senator Quay's career as Treasurer and Secretary of State of Pennsylvania. This is gratifying, but if it is prompted by a desire to punish

Quay for opposing the force bill, what are we to think of the moral condition of that

Good Man Senator Hoar?

If the gathering of Republicans from all parts of the country in Louisville next month shall result in a solution of the problem as to which is Chairman of the National Committee, Tom Carter or Mike

Young, the call will not have been vain.

Considering last year's results it does not seem as if either would wish to make any violent fight for the honor.

AMBASSADOR SIR JULIAN PAUNCEFOOTE might have transacted his business with

Mr. Cleveland just as well without putting on velvet and gold lace. An American people would like Sir Julian in a plain coat and breeches as much as if he were to wear the most gorgeous apparel known to the Empire, which is not enlarged a foot by the splendors of a magnificent Ambassador in a Jeffersonian republic.

CONSERVATIVE Senators do not like the proposed investigation into the characters of senatorial black sheep because it will "tend to bring the Senate into contempt."

But it is not still more contemptible to admit known rascals to the club and then try to shield them from the consequences of their rascality. A body which will deliberately do such things has no farther to fall in the moral scale.

WHILE other parts of the country are getting cyclones, hail and torrents of rain, Cincinnati professes to have felt an earthquake which nearly spilled a lot of compositors out of the fifth story of the Commercial Gazette office and terrorized many other people who happened to be high up at the time. Possibly there was no earthquake. There may have been only a little tip-up of the Ohio surface, caused by Mr. McKinley being in Washington.

THE power of "attorneys," hoodlums and blackmailers will be broken as soon as the respectable business men in the Municipal Assembly apply business methods to public affairs. Franchisees for public undertakings constitute a source of large public revenues which must not longer be neglected. The revenue possibilities of these franchises should be thoroughly studied and understood, and where-ever it seems that profits above a fair interest on the investment are insured by a monopoly privilege the excess should be reserved to the city. Do this and the "attorney's" occupation will be gone, for there will be nothing for him to sell or buy.

MR. LOUISIANA has recognized the genius of Paderewski and in so doing have not honored the young Polish musician more than themselves. Paderewski is one of the world's wonders. He is a music poet who interprets the mystic voices and expresses the unutterable thoughts that haunt the soul. He makes the piano sing in tones that entrance the ear and touch the heart.

He is a master of harmony, who puts melodic sweetness into all its mysteries.

He is a rare musical genius in whom the hand of the expert is merely the unfailing instrument of the soulful artist. His playing is the perfection of skill, blended with grace, tenderness and poetic charm, and although great musicians may come and go, this generation is not likely to know another Paderewski.

THE LASCALLE CASE.

The first United States Supreme Court decision written by Mr. Justice Jackson, the Tennessee Democrat appointed by President Harrison, was a decision affirming a State right that has long been disputed.

Because both international comity and treaty stipulations forbid, it was long ago decided that a fugitive from justice, surrendered by any foreign Government at the request of our Federal authorities, and by the latter turned over to the State from which he fled, could be held to answer in the latter for that crime only for which his extradition was demanded.

And because the Federal Constitution makes it the duty of a State to surrender fugitives from any other State of our Union, there has always been a contention that a State holding an extradited prisoner can not try him on charge but that on which his extradition was demanded and obtained from a sister State.

This contention that there is something in a State's Federal relation or in Federal supremacy, which deprives a State of power to try the perpetrator of a dozen crimes for any but one of them, provided he escapes to a neighboring State and is extradited, was denied by the Jackson decision in the Lascalle case, and the fact that a State's rights include the right to try a man for a dozen crimes, when he is surrendered by a sister State for only one crime, was emphatically asserted and affirmed by the Supreme Court.

Yet with an obtuseness and an ignorance remarkable in a newspaper of such preten-sions, the Globe-Democrat in an elaborate article treats this decision as a sort of last nail driven into the coffin of State rights, and gloats over it as a proof that Judge

Jackson and the other Justices of the Supreme Court had all recanted any and all

State rights doctrines they ever held.

Is it any wonder that the busy citizen sometimes shows a total misapprehension of such subjects when a pretentious political organ cannot comment on a very lucid and apparently unmistakable Supreme Court decision without mistaking its drift and reversing its purport?

THE NEW SOUTH.

The opening of the convention of Governors of Southern States in Richmond yesterday was a significant and interesting event. It is the first time the representatives of the South have met to consider ways and means of promoting the material progress of that section. The convention is rendered the more interesting by the contrast it presents to the convention of Southern representatives which met in the same hall thirty-two years ago. These two

ANARCHISTS AT PITTSBURG.

A Nest Found and the Birds Driven Away.

PITTSBURG, Pa., April 13.—A group of 108 Russian Anarchists has been unearthed in this city by the police after a search of several weeks. The group was organized by Bauer and Nold, who were recently sent to the penitentiary as accomplices of Berkman. The meetings have been stopped and the leaders have promised to leave the city at once.

A Boy Seriously Injured.

John Lawler, a 12-year-old school-boy, was accidentally run over by Albert J. Bauer, Secretary of the Gunn Fruit Co., 908 North Third street, as he was crossing at Sixth and Washington avenue about noon yesterday. The wheel passed over the boy's stomach and injured him severely. He was taken to the City Dispensary and Dr. Jordan examined him and made him as easy as possible and then sent him to the City Hospital. Dr. Jordan expresses the opinion that he has sustained some very serious internal rupture.

John Thomas Brady's Return.

John Thomas Brady, the well-known police character who left for the land of Mormon and Brigham Young several months ago, returned to the city yesterday, and was at once arrested on an indictment of assault to do great bodily harm. He is charged with striking Isaac Nathan with a stone on Nov. 1, last year.

A Detroit Woman's Way.

"Last fall I had a dress dyed at the dyehop, and paid $2.50 for the work," writes Mrs. Irving 1483 S. 10th St., Detroit. "I could use only part of the goods, so they were not all the same color. Last week I bought a package of diamond dyes for 10 cents, and dyed a whole dress with it. The dress is just lovely, and everything is an even color. I am not sure I have the same success if I should dye any more."

SHOULD BE MORE CONCISE.

Freeport Presbyterians Want the Creed of the Church Revised.

GALENA, Ill., April 13.—At the meeting of the Presbytery of Freeport the subject of a revision of the confession of faith was thoroughly discussed. A memorial was drawn up asking for a confession of faith less speculative and expressing more plainly the word, as set down in the Scriptures. A set of delegates was elected and several other subjects taken up.

IN FAVOR OF REVISION.

MOOREHEAD, Mo., April 13.—The Palmyra Presbytery concluded the second day of its session yesterday. The main subject of discussion was the revision of faith and at this session the body was in favor of it, instead of being opposed as it was last year.

A TRUST IN TROUBLE.

The Whiskey Combine Must Issue Bonds to Pay Rebates.

PEORIA, Ill., April 13.—The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Whiskey Trust was held here yesterday, and, contrary to expectations, succeeded in effecting the election of officers without the slightest friction. In order to meet obligations which will fall due within the next sixty days, the trust will have to borrow about $1,000,000, and it is said that bonds will be issued to raise the needed amount.

President Greenhut reviewed the unsatisfactory state of the trust's finances, which he attributed to the purchase of several distilleries and the increase and in the output which was stored in the warehouses in anticipation of increased taxation. False rumors on the stock exchange and a determined bearish attack had operated to depreciate the Trust's stock.

The Albany Argus Fight.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 13.—Armed peace reigns between the Hill and Cleveland factions in the fight for the control of the Albany Argus. Mayor Manning, the Cleveland representative, is in possession, the result of a stockholders' meeting yesterday, at which he was selected President of the company. A big array of counsel has been retained on both sides and from now on the fight will be conducted on legal lines.

ENGLISH VILLAGES.

OBJECT LESSON WHICH EACH TINY BIT OF OLD ENGLAND'S FACE AFFORDS.

Special Correspondence Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, April 12.—It is no wonder that the Englishman, in his heart, be he Irishman, Scotchman or Englishman, thrill with fond affection as he recalls, in any foreign land, the immediate environment of the home-spot that gave him birth. Were he but coter's child, and knew in his youthless hours only the peace and rural stings of penury, there is still untellable charm in the backward vista centering in the lowliest British home.

It is because rural England—and it is almost equally true of rural Scotland and Ireland—in nearly every square acre is so engendered in its age, association and natural whimsicalities, that those who possess it, or those who have left it and, for the absence, hold it more intensely close and precious, will justly brook no blemishment, any more than you would let some rustic, who comes into your home and sneers at your sweetest and most cherished, if simple, belongings—beautified by effort, hallowed by time and use, even more tenderly loved for your own errors and shortcomings—without pitching both him and his airs incontinently into the highway.

It is such a beautiful country; such a well kept and delicious old garden; such a smiling land in sunshine and snug and comfortable in its storm; and which gives to the stranger within it such a sense of constant interest, coupled with close human companionship and sympathy; that cynic and prig and incapable of interest in any land but his own, though one he, cannot now and then repress a kindling enthusiasm, be here and there picked into secret admiration, in this place and that find tender and associative interest.

In less than a three hours' journey, on an English day in the morning, one can see scenes of interest, of stirring quality and of restfulness and repose flash upon you from your carriage window! Still more gratefully beautiful are the things one will see and feel as innumerable hamlets, steadings and halls are passed. Glorious old manor houses flash from parks and demesne forests. Thatched roofs of village homes, yellow with lichen, are varied here and there by red tiling. Avenues of ancient elms, beech and lime give tempting vistas above broad roads, tessellated with lights and shades, and as gray and smooth as some old cathedral floor. Cropped hedges with trim, tiny hedges, give a sense of enclosure, rolling away in billowy hills of heather, spangled with the golden asphodel or wet meadows and tiny marshes where the yellow marigolds, or where the forget-me-nots are so dense and blue that their surface seems like a breeze-rippled pool. Hawthorn hedges are white and red, and beneath as banks of driven snow. Great masses of honeysuckle trail from copse and hedge and in, around and above all this May-time, nature-heaven, thrushes and blackbirds, high above the roaring of your train, flood all the day with song.

In the tremendous object lesson and historic reminder which each tiny bit of the face of England affords, there is no more impressive study than that of English villages and their folk. These villages are the most delightful of all objects in every panoramic rural scene. Closer study reveals countless hidden beauties—for even age and decay here possess a monumental beauty, and the artistic and vagrant mind. And their quaint, quiet folk of whom I shall particularly speak in another article, though regarded as dumb and sordid, still give to the wide one of the most interesting sociological studies to be found in any land.

Although many characteristics of English villages differ in different shires, or in different parts of the same shire, they all leave the same typical picture in the memory, when considered as part of the landscape. I never yet came to an English village, and I have visited hundreds on foot, that it had not the same general massing of picturesque effects as all others. This is due to its relative topographical situation. It was just the same whether nestled in an Avon, Wharfe, Derwent, or Tamar vale, clumped upon a breezy southern down; half hidden in the shadows of a midland hill or peak; topping along the edge of ragged chine or flowery burn; or wedged into the stony face of some dreary northern moor.

There it stood, ever a distinct and characteristic picture in itself. A rift of low-lying cottages, tiny spires of white and gray and red, at either side, became lost towards the center in luxuriant shrubbery. Then a few gables, quaint and old. Then either mass of foliage, denser and of darker hue. Then a jumbled mass of higher gray, and red, roofs and outcroppings of more pretentious structures. The highest, the highest mass of foliage, dominated by perhaps a battlemented roof, above which always rises a huge, square centuries-old tower that tells of the English parish church, from Land's End to the misty Cheviot Hills.

I sometimes think, wonderful and compact a storehouse of historic relics, of garnered art and of splendor in cathedra, hall and monastic ruin, as old England truly is, that after all the sweetest part of one's wanderings is experienced when the beaten lines of travel among these gray old nests, which the centuries have softened and beautified even in their age and decay, come with me, these rambling, into a few of these lovely old home-spots of rural England. Not far to the north of damp and grimy Liverpool is pretty Ormskirk. It is half village and half town, for the apices are humming here as almost everywhere in Lancashire and Yorkshire. Two huge, white roads, leading from the town, which were impassable mosses in olden times, rising to a gentle eminence, intersect the place, and the verdure growth of 400 years almost hides from view the ancient stone houses, the quaint old shops, the sleepy, restful inns and the historic church itself.

The old church looming above the red tiles of the cottage roofs is curiously surrounded by separate tower and steeple; the pile so gray, mellow and ivy-massed as to involuntarily suggest a gigantic tree lopped off in its lower trunk, where the huge battlemented tower stops, out of whose edge, where the steeple rises, has sprouted a second slender tree. The tradition goes that two precious maiden sisters, desirous of raising some sacred memorial, agreed upon erecting upon Ormskirk a tower and steeple, yet disagreeing as to the uniting and connecting their work, they finally expended all their wealth and energies upon both, each independent of the other. The earliest of the renowned Deys and Stanleys are buried here. Mossy, lichenous, slumberous, grave, the entire place is a wonderful picture of tender repose, and is but one of the scores of winsome Lancashire villages blending, low-lying and hushed in the pleasant landscape between the thunderous towns of mills.

What precious old bits of gray and sunshine and green are the half-deserted villages of Cockerthwaite and Hawkehead up here in the English lake region, the fescue in Cumbria, and the latter just inside Lancashire where that country pushes a rugged arm up among the scars, fells and pikes of the Scottish Alps! Cockerthwaite itself, where Wordsworth was born, is but one of the many quaint old Cumbrian villages, which seem as ancient and mossy as the rocks out of which they were hewn. It is a sweet, dim, dreamy and songful old spot, for the Derwent River sweeps melodiously by, and the Cocker River, from which the village derives its name, is emptied into the Derwent at the village side.

Wordsworth's father, John Wordsworth, was an attorney here, and law agent to Sir James Lowther, afterwards the Earl of Lonsdale. The house where the poet was born is a long, two-storied, hip-roofed structure, standing at a corner of Main street and a recessed alley, and must have been regarded as a stately affair in its time. A tier of nine windows in the second and eight in the first story face the street, which is shut off by a massive stone wall with wide coping and monumental projections at regular intervals and at the corners. In the area between the street wall and the house are several pretty trimmed shade trees, and the ample garden in the rear extends to the banks of the lovely Derwent.

Hawkehead lies midway between the quays of the English lakes, Windermere and Cockerthwaite, near which may be found the home of John Ruskin, and nestles prettily beside the beautiful Esthwaite Water. It is by far the most antique village in the lake country. The old school-house is standing just as Wordsworth left it. It is no more than a tiny stone dunces, with wide, low windows, a single broad, low door and a white-washed school-room interior, where a tall man would be in danger of bumping the ceiling beams with his head.

The schoolboy, Wordsworth, cut his name into his desk, and the scarred old plank is accordingly prized as a precious relic. Every one will remember the good old dame, Anne Tyson, with whom Wordsworth lived and who was so much a mother to him during his boyhood's days at Hawkehead. Her cottage is still standing, and

The snow white church upon the hill, made famous in the "Prelude," stands as then in a near field. Around it the sheep and lambs are grazing. But the old life went out of Hawkehead with the handlooms. You will never find more than a score of workmen in the village, and the once busy and dreary Stanemoor's wilds, and look down there upon dead old houses.

There lies the sinuous steel of the ancient village—a winding, cobbled, grass-grown street of half a mile in length, flanked by ruined houses, half of whose thatched roofs have fallen in. Far to the east lies the glimpse of the classic domain of Rokeby. To the north, the dells and fells where flows the river Tees. To the south, the quiet vale, where the white and red, and sings. That huge, lone, stone structure, the first at Bows from the Greta Bridge way, weird and ghostly under the huge spray of ivy, was formerly another Dotheboys Hall. Richard Cobden once owned it and made it his home.

Then the Unicorn Inn, with its acres of out-buildings, empty and moss-grown. Opposite, another silent inn, the Rose and Crown. Then, facing westward, a little Norman castle. Near it the ruins of a castle. Behind these ruins, the ancient Roman station of Savatras, where are remains of baths and an aqueduct. Then comes the ancient village of Eborac, the westward, where you will see, still standing, as if Dickens described a veritable Dotheboys Hall in his "Nicholas Nickleby."

It is a half-defined line of ragged gray cut in another line of gray above which is the lofty, dreary Haworth moor. There is but a single street, closing some tiny space for a house-length to the right and left. The yard-wide pavements are series of stone stairs and platforms. Beneath the latter are tiny shops and living rooms, all stand open. But few inhabitants are to be seen. Up, up, up, for a half-mile you nod a little and then, at a distance, the houses are set around it closely. Quaint shops and ancient inns crowd it at all sorts of curious angles. This is the head of the moor, and so-called, in habitations and in aristocracy.

Not for its attractiveness, but because it seems an outlet to somewhere, you pass into the moor. It is a maze of angles and windings. Suddenly another tiny open space confronts you. Here are an old, oblong, two-storied stone house, with a few yards of grass-plot at its side; a little stone church, attached to, rather than blended with, a grim Norman tower; a large, old, red-brick house, the crumpled and the whole barely covering an acre of ground. These were Haworth parsonage, church and church-yard, the earthly, and final, home of the Brownes; and their living eyes ever rested on Haworth moor, which rises immediately above the church-yard like a wall of rounded stone.

Come to such as these in the summer time only. Then fleecy clouds straggle over and between the hills as if shadowy hosts were marshaling behind the horizon. Here and there splashes of color like against old walls and housefronts. The heather blushes from the undulant green of the moors. And one can easily imagine bits of Apollonian pastoral scenery here in the shepherds and their flocks, like cameo reliefs on beds of dazzling emerald, with a perspective of billowy lines and misty clouds.

Over here in Northamptonshire, just at the edge of the garden shire of Warwick, is a wonderfully picturesque old gray house with its thatched beside Watling Street, most famous of Roman roads. There are both rest and delight in old, old Crick; and of splendor in its cathedra, hall and monastic ruin, as old England truly is, that after all the sweetest part of one's wanderings is experienced when the beaten lines of travel among these gray old nests, which the centuries have softened and beautified even in their age and decay, come with me, these rambling, into a few of these lovely old home-spots of rural England.

has flat-headed, mullioned windows, with massive wood lintels inside and huge bulks of oak, roughly squared and mottled over the angles and fripples. In these and old times and in half the huge stone farmhouses roundabout, tradition will tell you, Charles I. or Elizabeth passed a night. How wise of them to do so if they had the feeling, time and will.

THE COWBOY AS HE IS. More Stern and Commonplace Reality Than Poetry in His Life.

Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch. The life of the "cowboy" of the great West is but little known. Somehow the newspapers, and especially the writers of dime novels, have thrown a sort of romance about the cowboy that makes his life seem charming; but there is no charm about it. As a rule there are no more hard-working, simple and unassuming men than the cowboys. They have been maligned and slandered as much as any other men, because all the depravity committed on the frontier are attributed to the cowboys. It is not uncommon for him when he enters a town, after spending weeks and perhaps months in the great solitude of the plains, to get a little drunk and make a fool of himself and become a little frolicsome and reckless.

He has a careless way of handling a six-shooter that makes a tenderfoot the least bit nervous. But the cowboy drunk and the cowboy sober are two different persons. Drunk, he is like all other drunken men—inane for the time being and really not accountable for what he does; sober, he is usually quiet and as gentle as he can be. Living a life of danger makes him fearless and the cowboy sober is a different person. In his wild Western life his home is in the saddle. He frequently passes weeks without seeing a house or a town, and he is a wanderer of any kind. Where does he sleep? you will ask. On the ground, on a pile of straw, or in a "slicker," his only covering. It rains he usually sleeps on his pony, sitting upright. He has studied the habits of the cattle until he knows them. He has to take his turn to ride the circuit or keep guard during the night. They guard by reliefs. The cattle are "bunched" or gathered together, and the boys, save those on duty, sleep through the night. Those on duty must keep continually riding around the bunch, for a young cow or steer will occasionally take it into his head to steal away. The cowboy never sleeps until he is sure the cattle are safe.

AUSTRALIA'S CRISIS.

Land Booms and Overbuilding the Cause of the Trouble.

BANKS, CAUGHT BY DECLINING VALUES, RESTRICTING CREDITS.

Numerous Failures and a Feeling of Panic the Result—Extent of the English, Scottish and Australian Bank Crashes—Forty Millions Liabilities and Assets Unknown—A Cotton House Gone.

New York, April 12.—While the difficulties presented by the Australian financial situation have been well understood here, the suspension of the English, Scottish and Australian bank came as a good deal of a surprise. The bank has borne a reputation for conservatism and it has been generally supposed that it would pull through the bad times without closing its doors.

Wm. H. Douglass of Arkell & Douglass, Agents for the Australian-American Shipping Co., returned a few days ago from a trip to Australia, which he had taken to look over the condition of affairs there. He told a reporter something of the troubles of the colonies and how they led to the discomfiture of the banks. The news of the latest failure, however, surprised him.

"The causes of failure," said he, "were probably similar to those which led to the Commercial Bank's suspension the other day. The Commercial has been helped out since by the other big banks and it is likely the English, Scottish and Australian was one of those which assisted it. Australia is suffering from over trading, the collapse of land booms and similar ills, and the banks are affected by the same causes. They do business on a plan unlike that followed in this country. The banks out there have more or less relation to business. For instance, a man goes to a bank and shows that he has $50,000 capital. He gets credit for $100,000 on the overdraft system. This is the way business is carried on, and if one bank fails the others naturally begin to restrict credits, which is, of course, fatal to business and that sort of commercial activity." Along with the land booms there has been over-building, especially in Melbourne, where a crash came to be inevitable. In that city I suppose I was the only banker, each of which represented an investment of from $50,000 to $100,000, but which did not have a rental value of $1,000 a year. It is mostly English money which has been invested—nine-tenths of the total, I suppose. The big banks out there make loans on the overdraft system, and on stations and on wool, besides buying notes. Then there are smaller concerns—loan banks they are called—which make advances on produce, etc., and when the hard times came they were the first to suffer. A lot of them failed before any of the larger banks suspended.

"The troubles of the big banks do not necessarily involve bad management. For instance, a loan may have been made on property for only 50 per cent of its market value at the time, yet so great has been the fall in land that now the property may not bring within 20 per cent of the amount of the loan."

The public finances, too, were not in good shape Mr. Douglass pointed out. "The colonies," he said, "own almost everything, one might say, railroads and so on. They have been heavy borrowers for a long time. Since the Baring failure money has been hard to get and speculation has suffered. The efforts made to build up manufactures have gone to pieces in the last two years. All these things have left the colonies heavily indebted, in fact their debts are the greatest per capita in the world. Yet Australia is a rich country and it has many men with great fortunes."

"One great trouble with the country is its remoteness. It has a heavy reliance on labor is hard to get. The strikes there have done enormous damage, for it is impossible to get new men there, as would be done here in a similar case. The labor element has what might be called a half-control and runs things to suit itself. Wages are very high. A laborer gets from 12 to 15 shillings a day and works nominally eight hours, nearer seven. In general things are in a transition state in Australia, but I believe the situation will improve greatly."

None of the New York firms in the Australia trade would lose much if anything by the failure, Mr. Douglass said.

THE GIGANTIC FAILURE.
LONDON, April 12.—The English, Scottish and Australian Chartered Bank, which has failed for $40,000,000, was incorporated by royal charter in 1825, and was incorporated with a capital of $300,000 and a reserve fund of $100,000. The London office is at No. 38 Lombard street. Charles John Hogan is Chairman, and the Court of Directors includes William George Eldon, John Inglis, Sir William Anderson, J. D. Thompson, James Tullock and John Harrison Watson. The auditors are W. A. Ekin and Alexander Young, and the bankers for the institution are the Bank of England, National Provincial Bank of England, British Linen Co. Bank and the Bank of Ireland. The suspended bank has main branches at Sydney, Adelaide, Brisbane and Melbourne, and at various lesser points in the colonies of New South Wales, Victoria and South Australia.

No approximate estimate of the assets can yet be learned. The last balance sheet made public—April, 1892—showed deposits of almost $6,000,000. The only reason assigned for the failure is that there has been for weeks past a steadily increasing withdrawal of deposits.

ANOTHER LIVERPOOL COTTON FAILURE.
LIVERPOOL, April 12.—Samuel Williams & Co., cotton brokers of this city, have suspended with liabilities of $200,000. On account of this failure and for other reasons the cotton market is very unsettled.

FIRMS IN DIFFICULTIES.
BALTIMORE, Md., April 12.—H. T. Sweeney, an exclusive boot and shoe merchant at this place, has made an assignment to C. E. Hull for benefit of creditors. Liabilities, $3,909.50; assets, $5,000. Quite a number of the creditors are St. Louis houses.

NEW FLORENCE, Mo., April 12.—Louis Phillips has made an assignment of his general stock. The indebtedness amounts to $4,000. J. E. Dickinson was made assignee.

CHICAGO, Ill., April 12.—Two of the stockholders of the Illinois Type Foundry Co. have filed a bill asking that a receiver be appointed to wind up the affairs of the concern. The liabilities of the foundry are estimated at $75,000.

More Than the Preacher Asked.
From the New-Brussels Herald.
A prominent minister, invited to a colored congregation, took occasion to give them some good, wholesome doctrine on the morality of life. In the closing prayer the colored preacher said: "O Lord bless the brother that preached to us to-night. He's brought up the gospel about good livin'. He's done told us we must quit 'yin' and 'out stealin' and quit gettin' drunk; and he's told us we must pay our debts and keep our word good. O Lord, bless him with power and strength to practice what he preaches."

There's an odor of blossoms in the air—
The sky is without a fleck;
There's one thing certain—a change is near,
And Spring is at last here;
And she's tumbling the roses about her hair,
And there's violets round her neck,
And this is the song that to her we sing—
Though it isn't all-half as sweet
As the waifs of a world that seem to sing
After her tinkling feet;
For she is laughter and love and Spring
And she makes the world's heart beat.

SPECIAL NOTICES.
CHICAGO, Ill., April 10, 1893. Guarantee and Assurance Co., New York City.
N. Y. Gentlemen—I have just received your favorable letter of the 7th inst. regarding the $25,000 in full payment of policy No. 71,959, held in your company by my late husband, Edwin E. Brown, who was killed by footstep in St. Louis a short time since, the particulars of which are still fresh in the mind of the public. Proof was only completed and forwarded you about the first of this month. I am somewhat surprised that you have not yet promised action in this matter, which is in marked contrast with that of another company in which he held a similar policy. I feel that the courteous and prompt action of your representatives in this matter is a formal acknowledgment. I therefore, take pleasure in recommending your company as worthy the confidence of my friends and acquaintances, and any others who may want accident insurance. Respectfully,
MARTHA A. BROWN.

WHAT THEY DRANK.
A LIST OF CELEBRITIES WITH THE
DRINKS THEY LIKE BEST.

Written for the Post-Dispatch.
It is interesting to note the smallest details of great persons. History has to some extent kept track of the homely preferences of its heroes and heroines, and among other things the favorite tipples of well-known men and women have been noted. Here is a list of some of the best-known characters of different countries and different ages, and the drinks they most affected.

Napoleon I.—Strong black coffee and Chamberlain.
Queen Victoria—Sweet champagne, but Chamberlain—The red wine of Medoc.
Henry VIII.—Sherry.
Edmund Kean—Brandy. Doran says that after his return, utterly broken, in 1837, only constant glasses of "brown brandy" to get through his scenes.

Addison—The best claret.
Charles Lamb—Genuine London porter.
Pitt and Eldon—Port, of which the Lord Chancellor could drink three bottles.
Richelieu—Brandy, plentifully seasoned with pepper.
Goethe—The wine of Johannisberg.
King John—Draughts of new ale, a surfeit of which combined with peaches is supposed to have hastened his end.

Dr. Johnson loved port-wine in moderation, and by his own description was "a hardened and shameless tea drinker, whose kettle had seldom time to cool." Heard Quatre—The wine of Surinnes. He seldom drank anything else.
Tullycrane—Claret in moderate glasses.
Sir Astley Cooper, the great surgeon, who in 1815 made $100,000 in fees, and who slaving at his profession twelve hours daily, said he could digest anything but "sawdust," drank two tumblers of water at dinner and two glasses—never exceeding them—of port wine afterward.

Byron—Hook and soda-water and gin and water.
Frederick the Great—Tokay.
Rubens—Marsala, the wine of sunny Spain.
Nabab—Old Chablis.
Marshall de Saxe—Champagne. He declined that France owed her greatness to her vineyards.
Humboldt—Sauterne.
Charles the Fifth—Alicant.

Louis XVI. Burgundy. He had such faith in its medicinal properties that he gave orders to the keeper of the menagerie at Versailles to administer six bottles a day to a pet dromedary which had grown feeble with age. Notwithstanding this generous treatment the ungrateful creature died, to the great despair of his nurse, who petitioned the King with a view of obtaining the "succession of the dromedary," that is to say, all the advantages attached to his person.

Darwin—One glass of claret daily.
Matthew Arnold—Claret. He was accustomed to drink water in the middle of the day, and at late dinner took a glass or two of sherry or some light claret mixed with water.

Queen Victoria is very choice about her wines. The royal wine-cellar is situated in an out-of-the-way corner of St. James Palace. A servant whose duty it is to look after the wine always goes about with her Majesty, and there is also one in attendance wherever any of the Royal Princes may be in residence. A large staff is engaged at the wine cellars of St. James. Palace, for the Queen imports a great quantity of her own wine, and one department is solely devoted to bottling purposes. The wines are of the choicest—rare old port and burgundy, of which the Queen is an excellent judge, and champagne, upon which a difference of opinion always exists as to whether this is her favorite beverage or whether she drinks it out of regard to the preferences of her guests. In the royal cellar there is still some of the famous claret Chateau Margaux, presented to the Queen by the ill-fated Louis Philippe in 1846. Tokay is also a favorite wine of hers, and cocon has supplanted tea in her affections. The toast on the anniversaries of great battles at the royal dinners of Windsor Castle were always drunk in red wine when the Georges were the rulers, and as the Empress is reputed to be of the Royal Princes may be in residence. A

FISH AT CHICAGO.
Odd Features of the Great Show to Be Seen Next Month.

CHICAGO, Ill., April 13.—Live fish by the car load were to-day received at the aquarium for the government display in the World's Fair Fisheries building. The fishy tribes of all the world are represented in the collection, which is a particularly fine one. The decorative work on the aquarium is just being completed. Each tank presents the proper environment for the special variety of fish which is to live in it next summer. Some tanks present miniature cliffs, reefs and overhanging embankments, cleverly wrought in cement. Submerged grottoes present themselves in others, while still others present water-logged tree trunks and stumps, so deftly formed as to defy detection except by close examination.

Every detail, even to the faint colored moccasins, lines of bark and grain, is so faithfully reproduced as to be photographic in accuracy. By the system of aeration, the picturesque effect is greatly heightened. Concealed tubes containing compressed air and in rocky crevices, where the air is converted into a gaseous spray, spatters forth as from a miniature submarine volcano. A feature of the display consists of a fish hospital. In the tank devoted to this purpose, methods are shown to detect diseases of the food fishes will be shown. At present the hospital contains a number of trout whose gills are inflamed from a fungus trouble. The treatment in this case consists of immersion in a strong solution of salt. The cases are rapidly improving.

The attraction at the Woman's Building to-day was a clock composed of feathers of prairie chickens, sent as part of the Dakota women's exhibit. The clock is a curious piece of workmanship and was made by a Dakota woman, who spent ten years in getting the material. Some idea can be gained of the number of birds that were used by the fact that the material from the fact that all the feathers are of a lovely and peculiar hue and on three or four found on each bird. Each feather is held in place by no less than 100 stitches. The value placed on this garment by the woman who made it is $1,000.

The dedication of the Austrian village, which was to have been held to-day amid much speech-making and feasting, has been postponed. It was thought better to wait until the work of construction had been pushed further along. The ceremony will be held Friday noon.

The Hagenbach collection of trained wild animals arrived to-day. There are about 1,000 specimens in all.

DEMANDED A BIRTH CERTIFICATE.

Recorder Hobbs Determined to Take No More Chances.

William F. Grimes of 4544 Shaw avenue and Miss Lizzie Coates of 4410 Hunt avenue called at the office of Recorder of Deeds Hobbs in the Court-house yesterday, and made application for a marriage license. The Recorder, however, after giving up the prospective bride, a youthful looking girl, who did not appear to be the required 18 years, refused to issue the license until convinced that she was of age. The pair were to be balked in their purpose of becoming united and went up to the City Hall, where Miss Coates secured a certified copy of the third record, showing conclusively that she was born the 1st day of January, 1875, which made her just 18 years, 4 months and 12 days of age exactly. With this fact in black and white, which cost them $1.00, the couple returned to the Recorder's office and secured the law's permission to be joined together. Recorder Hobbs has the certified copy of the young lady's birth now filed away with the rest of the important records of his office.

A "Bright Cold" or Cough.—"Brown's Bronchial Troches" will give immediate relief.

Deserted by His Wife.

Michael Connors, a native Irishman, living on Fifteenth street, between O'Fallon and Bidle streets, called at the prosecuting Attorney's office yesterday and complained that his wife had left him and their four children from 9 o'clock to 4 o'clock, she left him about a month ago, he stated, and he has since been caring for the children as best he could. The result of the children into three asylums, he stated, but they would not be taken. The Recorder, however, Connors stated, said that she had another husband in the city, and that he was a man of no claim on her. Connors was told that nothing could be done for him. He saw his wife last night and tried to induce her to return, he stated, but she refused.

Suit Against Pate McPherson.

George F. Pate, a prominent citizen, yesterday against Charles M. Switzer and Pate McPherson to recover $997, the alleged value of 1,000 shares of mining stock placed in their hands for sale and which, he alleges, was unlawfully converted to their own use.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical health, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.
